Dear Reader:

Mount Shasta. It looks very beautiful from the Mount Shasta City and Weed vista. It also looks beautiful on the converse side from the Dorris and Tulelake view. Mystical from Fall River, and rugged from McCloud. The same beloved mountain, yet so different.

We found the same thing with this project. “The Fall.” This was the topic we posed to high school students around Mount Shasta. Many depicted it as the season with its associated themes. Others were more literal. Some felt abstract art as the best medium.

The word that comes to mind is: perspective. It’s how you look at things. Different angles, takes, lighting, seasons, and depths and perceptions. Then there is the internal. Such as the observer’s background, their preferences, what they are open to seeing and what they cannot see. How to tell which view is right? Or which is best? Maybe all are true. Maybe all are false. Most likely, the truth is somewhere in the middle.

It was really refreshing to see how a simple topic could be translated in so many different ways. This gives us hope that the spirit of creativity and perspective is intact and thriving in our youth.

So, what is your perspective? On life? On yourself?

Description:

At first when I saw the theme was fall, I thought of doing a spooky path with pumpkins and candles. But Halloween had already passed, so I came up with the idea of a secret garden. I decided to use oil pastels to color on a canvas. It took me 2 days to completely finish this piece of art. It was a great learning experience since I had never used oil pastels before. It was fun to use pastels and now I have confidence in myself that I will be able to use pastels in the future.

Description:

When I was told the theme was fall I had already had an idea of a spooky pumpkin for my abstract watercolor project in celebration of the then upcoming halloween, so I decided that with how well the project came out, it would be a good entry to fit the theme of the contest. I really enjoyed working with watercolor as it was a new medium for me and it gave me lots of opportunities to practice and try new strategies and styles. The whole thing has given me new confidence in using watercolor.

Description:

Since the prompt of this competition was Fall, I wanted to make an art piece that really brings out the colors of the trees, the sky, and the bushes. So I used colored pencils, wanting to make the colors more vibrant and bright. The character on the right is named Cain, he is 22 years old, he has always seen the world as bright and colorful, always thinking positive. The character on the left, Miguel, is 21 years old. He has always seen the world as gray, constantly thinking negatively. He was abused as a kid, so he has a huge amount of self hatred and anger inside himself. But Cain is there to help him realize how beautiful life really is, how Miguel shouldn't define his world in black and white because there is so much hiding amongst the grays. He shows Miguel the leaves falling off the trees, trying to teach him that it is okay to let go, to get rid of self hatred and his rage. Cain chose the most peaceful spot he knows, the bridge. He chose the bridge because it has the most intense hue of red, orange, yellow, and pink trees and bushes. I put the House Sparrow beside Miguel because it symbolizes new beginnings, hope, and freedom, something Miguel has always wanted as a child. I hope this drawing helps people understand that life starts at the end of your comfort zone, so go color your life outside the boundaries and live without fear, life is too short to live in black and white.

I first drew a tree, and then the rest of the picture branched from the tree. The picture went from blank to life-filled in a few hours.

Title: All Hallow Eve

Description: These are the things I think about when you say the word Fall. Fall is the time of Halloween and harvest. In art we have been learning about erasing, blending, and shading. This image is on white paper and done with drawing pencil.

Title: Fall Cats

Description: Bright colors that come with fall have always instantly caught my eye. When the sun lit up the beautiful tree, I knew I had to paint it. My cat, as seen in the painting, has always lit up my life like the sun did to the tree. I wanted to capture just this. His curiosity and content within the moment. This was painted fully with watercolor.

Title: The warmth of leafs

Description: My art was to show how the fall of leaves can be warm and a sign of new coming soon. I chose a warm and friendly environment being a park with a trail. The leafs being out with the old, in with the new. And the trail being a path towards the new.
